

Millbrook

Located off Evans Mill Road in Buckingham County, Virginia, is the site of Millbrook Plantation, home of John Wales Eppes, a son-in-law of Thomas Jefferson. Eppes was a graduate of Hampden-Sydney College and active in Virginia politics. After his wife Maria died shortly after the birth of their third child, Eppes moved to Millbrook, his tobacco plantation. The house at Millbrook was subsequently destroyed by fire, but a graveyard and possibly the foundation of a greenhouse survive.
